“Westcott House continues to offer one of the most encouraging spectacles in the Church of England – a large group of young, gifted, committed people, from all social and professional backgrounds, who are actively exploring God’s call to ordained ministry in the Church. It is a real sign of hope for the Church of England that it can attract such a diversity of candidates who want to grow in a spiritual discipline deeply rooted in the tradition and to be equipped with the intellectual and imaginative resources they will need for ministry in a complex and fast-developing society. Westcott takes theology seriously and it takes spiritual growth and maturity seriously. Its goal is to continue to help the Church take these things just as seriously – because without these, the Church loses its direction and its integrity.”

FORMATION

Public ministry requires imagination, creativity and a deep trust in God. We help students grow in their faith, and assist them in developing the openness and resilience they will need to follow God’s call for the rest of their lives.

Your learning will be enriched by belonging to a community of Christian discipleship. Living in community and exploring a shared rule of life will help you to develop an understanding of working together and exercising leadership. It will enable you to discover that combination of confidence and humility essential to public ministry.

A life of ministry can be very demanding, and we help students understand the importance of self-awareness, personal boundaries and essential care of themselves and their families. For many, one of the most challenging aspects of formation is moving from being a ‘personal’ Christian, whose faith is known by those closest to them, to being a ‘public’ Christian with a role, and responsibility to their community — and beyond.

We pay particular attention to this shift of identity for those preparing for the priesthood. Formation for priestly ministry is not simply about preparing for a new and distinctive role. If priests are called ‘to set forth the mystery of love’, then priestly formation will also affect the depths of their being.

“…until Christ be formed in you”
Galatians 4.19

Four distinct elements lie at the heart of our understanding of formation:

HOLINESS
Nurturing our relationship with God through worship and prayer — growing to become holy and faithful ministers, disciplined in the life of prayer, nourished by word and sacrament, and building our awareness of ourselves in relation to God and others.

WISDOM
Engaging in rigorous theological study — growing in wisdom to become ‘instinctive’ theologians, immersed in the riches of the Christian tradition, committed to intellectual rigour and alert to the demands of public ministry in ecumenical and multifaith contexts.

COMPASSION
Developing our understanding of pastoral care and cultivating an awareness of the world and its needs — growing in compassion, creativity and imagination to become true pastors.

OPENNESS
Participating in God’s mission in the world — growing in our passion for the transformation of society, and our commitment to the flourishing and renewal of the Church.

“The closeness with others in prayer, in community, in study, and in ecumenical dialogue is a huge part of the Westcott experience. It is challenging, rewarding, nurturing, and totally holistic.”
Worship and prayer are at the centre of our life, and at the heart of the process of formation. The Eucharist and the rhythm of the daily office—morning prayer, evening prayer and night prayer—hold and shape us.

On Thursday evenings the whole community—ordinands, students, families and friends—gathers for the community Eucharist and a shared meal. The evening ends with the singing of compline by candlelight.

Everyone at Westcott House is supported in developing a pattern of personal prayer. Each ordinand meets regularly with a spiritual director.

There is a weekly hour for contemplative prayer; opportunities for developing fresh expressions of worship, and time for meditation in chapel before morning prayer.

We are blessed with two places of worship. On Thursdays, we worship in All Saints Church, a Gothic revival church adjacent to Westcott. For most services, we are in the chapel, a building distinguished by its uncluttered simplicity. It is an ideal space for the wide range of services held there: from sung high mass to all-age worship, from adoration of the blessed sacrament to informal prayer and praise.

We believe it is important to inhabit the Anglican tradition of worship and to learn how to adapt and improvise from a deep understanding of the structures of common prayer. Students are thoroughly involved in the planning and leading of worship.

“Whatever else happens, the daily offices keep going as a constant—and beautiful—reminder of why we are all here.”

“Our devotion to the Eucharist and to the life of prayer is at the heart of all that we are and are becoming.”
The calling to theological study and learning is an adventure into the depths of the very nature of God and the mystery of his redeeming love.

Through our commitment to theological excellence, creativity and rigour, we form enthusiastic and perceptive lifelong learners, immersed in the riches of the Christian tradition. The fruit of such learning is practical wisdom for faithful Christian discipleship and ministry.
God’s mission in the world and our participation in it are central to our approach to theological learning. The more we learn about God’s love and compassion, the more we long for ourselves and the Church to become instruments of His grace and mercy, and bearers of the good news. Being equipped for ministry is a process of being transformed into the likeness of Christ.

Such an outward-facing disposition is woven into the life of Westcott House. Self-giving and vulnerable engagement with the realities of our world and the fragility of Christian community are opportunities to practise the values of God’s kingdom and discover the abundance of His grace.

Westcott House places a strong emphasis on contextual learning for ministry and mission. In addition to encouraging students to reflect on the ‘real life’ implications of their studies, we offer a range of placements that form an integral part of the study programme. Students can practise and develop the skills, knowledge and dispositions of Christian ministry by working and learning alongside a priest, chaplain or other experienced practitioner, and reflecting on their learning with the support of a tutor in college.

“The CHESTERTON PROJECT”
In parallel to their studies, students from Westcott House and Ridley Hall engage with parishes in the Chesterton area of Cambridge. They meet together once a week with their tutors for theological reflection, prayer and other group activities. This pathway offers a rich, collaborative and integrated approach to learning.

THE MANCHESTER PROJECT
Four students can spend two months at a time in multi-ethnic communities in Manchester and Salford. A college house provides the base from which the students work in nearby parishes. Under the supervision of our Manchester-based tutor, during this time the students form a transient community, working on projects and praying together.

LYN’S HOUSE
This is a small residential community which offers hospitality to adults with learning disabilities and seeks to nurture Christian faith and spirituality. Each year two Westcott students reside at Lyn’s House while many others volunteer by helping with meals, tea parties and prayers.

OTHER OPPORTUNITIES
These church placements involve two or more months of full or part-time engagement in a parish local to the student, offering opportunities for in-depth involvement in the parish and reflection on the life of the Church and its embodiment of God’s mission. Students are also engaged in placements outside of parish or church contexts – in hospices, hospitals, prisons, schools, the army and other institutions and community projects.

““There are great opportunities to get involved in various outreach projects that make a real difference to people’s lives and help you grow in faith.””

MINISTRY
We encourage our students to explore opportunities for ministry and mission overseas. Each year approximately a quarter of our students travel overseas as part of their programme of training and formation.

ACADEMIC EXCHANGES
Westcott currently has exchange relationships in America with Yale Divinity School and The University of the South (Sewanee), where students can undertake formal study for an academic term each year. We also arrange shorter exchange programmes with Ming Hua Theological College (Hong Kong), and the Evangelisches Predigerseminar (Wittenberg).

OVERSEAS CHURCH PLACEMENTS
In addition to their placement in a UK parish, many students arrange short placements overseas. We have strong contacts with Anglican churches in many global contexts, including America, Hong Kong, India, and Brazil. Some students use their own contacts as well. In these placements, students learn about global Anglicanism, global Christianity, interfaith relations, and Christian ministry in contexts and cultures outside their own.

OTHER OVERSEAS PLACEMENTS
We gather information on other overseas opportunities, which is made available to our students. Two of the most popular programmes run by other institutions are the short study programmes at Tantur Ecumenical Institute in Jerusalem, and the Contextual Theology Programme of the College of the Transfiguration in Grahamstown, South Africa.

MINISTRY DIVISION OPPORTUNITIES
We also encourage ordinands to apply for overseas study opportunities administered by Ministry Division. These include study in Germany as part of the Meissen Agreement, or in Switzerland at the Ecumenical Institute in Bossey. There are also several opportunities for study in Rome, at The Pontifical Beda College, The Venerable English College, or The Lay Centre at Foyer Unitas.
COMMUNITY

Our common life is energising, supportive, challenging and transforming. It is an intense experience that forms friendships, sparks conversations and generates ideas that set students thinking for the rest of their lives.

Public ministry demands a disposition of openness to others; by praying, eating and living as a community we grow in self-awareness, seeing ourselves as others see us and being attentive to those around us. We meet together over meals served in the House’s dining room. Each Wednesday, we meet in small tutor groups for prayer and breakfast.

Living at Westcott House involves relaxation and recreation as well as study and prayer. While Saturday is the college ‘day off’ and ordinands are attending local parishes or college chapels on Sundays, a range of social activities and shared meals are organised for those in college at the weekend. Our common room has a well-stocked and convivial bar.

Partners and families are encouraged to be involved in community life. Partners can organise their own events, and elect their own representatives on the Common Room Committee.

Preparing for public ministry is a time of transition and we provide support for everyone. The first point of contact on pastoral matters for students is their tutor. All members of the community – ordinands, students, and partners – can speak to the chaplain in total confidence.

“The community is diverse and international with a real call for embracing diversity in unity.”

“Preparing for public ministry is a time of transition and we provide support for everyone.”

“The friends I’ve made will support me through a lifetime of ministry.”

“Situated in beautiful private gardens, the main buildings of Westcott House are noble examples of the late Victorian Arts and Crafts style. Our location is unrivalled; being in the heart of the city you will find all the facilities and opportunities offered by Cambridge on your doorstep. The experience of training and formation at Westcott House is enriched by the vibrant, accessible cultural and intellectual life of the city.”

ACCOMMODATION

SINGLE STUDENTS
Students who live in college are offered either a single room or a set (study and bedroom) on one of the staircases in Old Court. Each staircase has shared bathroom and kitchen facilities. A limited number of students may be resident all year round.

COMMUTERS OR “WEEKLY BOARDERS”
Students who study in Cambridge during the week and go home at the weekend are usually offered a double room in Old Court. The accommodation costs are the same as those for a single student.

MARRIED STUDENTS AND THOSE WITH DEPENDANTS
The college has a number of one, two, and three-bedroom apartments on-site. Students may choose to rent accommodation privately in the city. A study space is provided on-site.

A play area in New Court, overlooked by the family accommodation block, provides facilities for children. There are good schools nearby, and we offer support and advice to students with children on the selection of schools.

All our accommodation has unlimited broadband access.

“I really like the surroundings — it’s so peaceful, calm and beautiful.”
“Prisons are institutions for broken people, and I am often reminded of what people are capable of doing to each other through those I meet. Meeting with penniless people who find forgiveness and a fresh hope is a very real experience in prison with penitent people who find the way to forgiveness. I am often reminded of what people are broken people, and I am often looking for the work of God in the midst of the ultra-secular world.”

JENNIE HOGAN
Chaplain, Goodenough College, London (below)

“In Redlingfield there is no school, pub, shop, village hall or post office so where will a sense of community come from? The church is active and involved in its community, making a contribution, giving people a place to gather – and the church is growing.”

“I was a relatively new Christian when I arrived at Westcott having been baptised and confirmed only 10 years earlier. I learnt to incorporate a regular pattern of prayer into my day. I also developed a true love of the Eucharist, mainly encouraged by friends with a deeply Catholic spirituality. Singing through the tears at Mass became something that I experienced more and more – and still do.

I enjoyed the Chapel and the opportunity to live alongside fellow ordinands. The conversations and the time given to prayerly development have been extraordinary blessings to me as time has gone on.

To those applying now, I’d say be yourself and take the long view – the seeds sown in you at Westcott will keep bearing surprising but wonderful fruit for a long time!”

Vicar of St Paul and St Mark, Old Ford, East London

“Whatever else happens, the daily offices keep going as a constant – and beautiful – reminder of why we are all here.”

“Prisons are institutions for shaping the future, envisioning their congregations and transforming the communities they serve for the common good.
